New York 1973

Having escaped to London from war torn Germany as a young boy, George passed a certain tube station with a fairy-tale name on his way to medical college each day, and fell in love with that name.

Elephant & Castle Prince Street opened in The Village NY in '73 across from St Vincent's Hospital where

George had worked as an oncologist since the 1950's. After two decades of short lunch-breaks where he could never get anything he wanted to eat, finally he retired to a life of eating everything he wanted to eat, in his own restaurant with a special name. His passion and obsession for quality was infectious and E&C became a New York classic within a few years. The popularity of the original E&C encouraged George to open several other hugely successful New York restaurants, notably Keens Steakhouse in Upper Midtown, which to this day, consistently ranks in The NY Times top 5 places to eat in the City.

Dublin 1989

On one of his many visits back to Europe, George made a random but inspirational visit to Ireland and found himself in an area in Dublin that reminded him of the location of the first E&C in Manhattan. Here he was in late 80's desolate Temple Bar with it's cobbled back streets, empty pubs and warehouses and no traffic. Perfect! Our doors opened in January 1989 and by Summer of that year the queues had already started for our fantastic food and spectacular atmosphere! Outside the world has greatly changed, but inside our swinging doors we try to keep things just the way they are.

New Year 2022

We start into the New Year with a focus on only one kind of positive. Positive mindset and a hard-working brand ethos which continues to keep all our restaurants open and busy in difficult times. As always we look forward to brighter days ahead where the Elephant & Castle family tree continues to grow, with branches opening in Galway, Bray, Foxhunter Lucan, and Brittas Bay prepares for the waves of Spring and Summer trade to return once more. So to all of our fantastic customers we thank you for your endless support and cannot wait to look after even more of you this year!
